Liebstern, December 4, 1861. Eurpows-Arrand: Cold, biting whole from the North are leaviling along the once green, pleasant vallies of Virginia-the woods bend and mean in the dark red similgist of morning while hill and mountain are frost-sipped, and stripped of the ones luxurinatiolings that decked their variegated and selema lastes. Dense mists hang upon the river's bed, winding along which earls upon the morning sun brains in varied bees of brilliancy and splender. For nway from the highes of Maryland, emerging foun the mists of morning, while, save the challenge of a farm yard chaintis ber, the surroundings. slumber in the cold smact glories of the country in winter. Standing on a rise in the road, the glancing bayonsts, watching the road and over while, as the eye wanders enstward, columns of smolec behind wooded knolls tell of Federal camps in Maryland. Govered army-wagon old and young, and it not much mistaken, there cut conflict by the vain and illusory hope the trains are seen excepting along the edge of woods. Is a very severe "the asking as now and then can be takenly heard the drawn recent's hences. In hasto, f infantry or the slight faint eche of the bugle call.
